Why does Dinesh Panwar of Urbanscape value TRENDS?

TRENDS is a perfect source of information for everyone who needs to build a home, be it an end-user or a professional. The format is very simple to understand and non-cluttered, and the book lays more emphasis on projects, details and materials, thereby giving one a complete picture of the project. The introduction of the commercial category projects shall further help professionals and clients equally. I appreciate the way new talent is being recognised through each issue.

A graduate of Institute of Environmental Design (IED), Gujarat, Dinesh Panwar has been working in the field of architecture since 1999. After becoming a partner in a firm Positive Spaces, Panwar branched out in 2002 to start his own firm, Urbanscape. The firm specialises in high-end residential designs; and endeavours to test and reinvent architecture. Though he considers Ronchamp Chapel by Le Corbusier as one of his most inspirational works, he also admires local Indian architecture. Panwar looks up to Le Corbusier for the fearlessness of form, Tadao Ando for the purity of material, form and serenity of spaces, Sir Norman Foster for constantly challenging the 'now', and Herzog and De Meuron for the innovative use of material and bold designs.
